Mr. Bruce A. BAIRD
Covington & Burling LLP

June 10, 2011

Dear Mr. Baird,

In reference to your inquiry dated May 10, 2011, I would like to inform you of the position of the Government of Japan as attached.

I hope it will serve to clarify your matter of concern.

Yours Sincerely,

Tadashi IZAWA
Ambassador Extraordinary and Plenipotentiary of Japan to Ukraine

The Government of Japan has been aware that the investigation of criminal cases against the former Prime Minister of Ukraine, Yulia Tymoshenko is still ongoing. It, therefore, would like to withhold comment on the issues, such as confirmation or denial of the "misuse", its details etc., arising from presumption.

Since May 2010, the Government of Ukraine has confirmed that the GIS funds are fully accounted for, in response to the repeated inquiries by the Government of Japan. With regard to the ecological projects, they are being implemented steadily.

It should be mentioned, however, that the Government of Japan is not a party of the contract on purchasing carbon emission credits within the Green Investment Scheme with Ukraine.

Japan undeterred from buying Ukraine carbon permits

TOKYO | Thu Jan 13, 2011 8:11am EST

(Reuters) - Japan has no objection to buying carbon emissions rights from Ukraine and has shown that money Tokyo previously paid for permits has been properly accounted for, a government official said Thursday.

Ukraine's current government has accused the former president of misusing the funds.

"We sent people to Ukraine twice last year and in November full amount of money was secured at the account," So, no problem," the official said.

Developed nations which are comfortably below greenhouses under the Kyoto Protocol can sell excess emission rights called Assigned Amount Units (AAUs).

The AAU deal for 30 million tonnes of carbon dioxide exchanged in 2009 with Ukraine's former government headed by Yanukovych. The payments were to be used for emissions cuts and energy projects.

Ukraine's government has accused Tymoshenko of misappropriating 1.19 billion euros ($499 million) from the sale of AAUs, under a broad investigation into the affairs of her government.

Tymoshenko denies charges of misusing state funds rather than selling AAUs.

Ukraine's President Viktor Yanukovich is set to visit Japan next week. His agenda is expected to include selling more AAUs but the government official said Kiev has not officially made a request to buy them in Japan.

The official said that Japan may not buy more emission credits from Ukraine immediately as its last purchase, from Poland, was a target for 2008-2012.

Japan's government and companies have been the biggest buyers of carbon rights outside Europe, aiming to help the world's third largest economy cut greenhouse gas emissions to 1.19 billion tonnes on track by 2020, down 6 percent from 1990 levels.

A carbon trader in Tokyo said hardly any Japanese company had bought credits from Ukraine after the questions raised by the allegations of corruption.

"A negative image has attached to Ukraine's AAUs. I do not think they will buy many more," the trader said, adding that most of Japan's power companies, have already bought as many credits as they can.

Heorhiy Filipchuk was arrested on Dec. 15 for allegedly abusing his position during when he served in former Prime Minister Yulia Tymoshenko's government

Former minister of environmental protection Filipchuk arrested

Dec 15, 2010 at 09:47 | Staff reports

Former Environment Minister Heorhiy Filipchuk was arrested on Dec. 15 for allegedly abusing his position during when he served in former Prime Minister Yulia Tymoshenko's government from December 2007 to March 2010, according to Interfax-Ukraine.

Yuriy Boichenko, spokesman for the general prosecutor's office, confirmed the arrest, telling the news agency that Filipchuk would be held in pre-trial confinement while the charges are investigated. "We will release details about the case in the near future," he said.

Filipchuk is the second minister from Tymoshenko's cabinet suspected by law-enforcement authorities of committing offences while in office. Former Economy Minister Bohdan Danylyshyn was detained on Oct. 19 in the Czech Republic for allegedly causing damages to the state. He is currently mulling whether to ask for political asylum.

Following President Viktor Yanukovych's inauguration in February, law-enforcement agencies have also arrested for Anatoly Makarenko, former head of the State Customs Service, and Ihor Didenko, former first deputy head of state gas company Naftogaz Ukraine, who served under Tymoshenko. Both men are in custody awaiting trial.

Prosecutors plan to release from custody some ministers of Tymoshenko's government

Mar 22 at 14:38 | Interfax-Ukraine

The Prosecutor General's Office of Ukraine plans to assist in releasing from custody former ministers of the government led by former Premier Yulia Tymoshenko, who have completed their acquaintance with the materials of the criminal cases against them, First Deputy Prosecutor General Rinat Kuzmin has said.

"Today a decision has been taken regarding those cases that are completed, to review the need for holding in custody and releasing from custody those persons who have finished their acquaintance with the materials of criminal cases," he said at a press conference in Kyiv on Tuesday.

Kuzmin said that this decision had been already taken regarding former First Deputy Justice Minister of Ukraine Yevhen Korniychuk and former Environmental Protection Minister Heorhiy Filipchuk.

"These decisions will also be taken for other detained persons who have completed their acquaintance with the materials of criminal cases, and there is no need for them to be further held in custody," the first deputy prosecutor general said.

When asked by reporters whether a decision to release former Interior Minister Yuriy Lutsenko from custody will be taken, Kuzmin said: "Yuriy Lutsenko has not acquainted himself with the materials of [his] criminal case yet."
